ARBITRATOR

Arbitration is private dispute resolution procedure chosen by the conflicting parties instead of heading towards the courts. An arbitrator helps the parties at dispute to arrive at a final consensual agreement or settlement. The responsibilities of an arbitrator include settling disputes, analyzing information using knowledge of facts and industry practice, and creating reports on outcomes of the arbitration process.

EXAMPLE FROM THE FIELD

Harshini Kanhekar's life has been dealing with fire, literally, for the past two decades. She is India's first female firefighter whose life inspires one to live trying and achieve the seemingly impossible. Harshini reminisced about the time she finally got accepted into the NFSC (National Fire Service College). She talked about how her father called to give her the good news as he held onto the telegram in his hand. Harshini's seven-semester course needed the students to live on campus, but for her, the rule was bent- allowing her to go home. Harshini worked with heavy water and suction hoses and performed mock drills with dummies. Her first assignment was a cylinder blast in Shirdi, when she was in college. Harshini performed difficult tasks while she was just a student learning the ways of life and fire fighting at the same time. Before joining ONGC in 2006 (and eventually becoming the Sr. fire officer), she dealt with several fires across Mumbai, Kolkata and Delhi where her six-hour operation in a tin factory gained recognition. Today, Harshini is an inspiration to women all over the country.*
