To initiate this, though regional/state language may continue to remain the MOI or Medium of Instruction, however, L1 or the language spoken by the child at home, maybe used and developed by teachers at least in the oral domain during classroom transactions from pre-school onwards. Wherever possible, mother tongue may be introduced as MOI in foundational years, while state language may be introduced slowly by class 3. In predominantly tribal areas, teachers who belong to these areas should be identified to ensure that their mother tongue becomes the link for their education. The exit strategy from L1 or MOI should be delayed as far as possible, and states/UTs may not like to consider it before class 5, wherever possible. Wherever the mother tongue of a larger area/ geography is unique, states/UTs may make efforts to develop resources in that very language and take up teaching and learning in that language upto grade 5 as far as possible.
